Summary: This is just a cute little short story, I guess, for my K rated entry. It's a modern AU. Enjoy!

Merricup: waking up

Hiccup woke up to the obnoxious sound of his cat, Toothless, making a noise that sounded like a mix of crying, screaming, and throwing up. Before investigating, he took a brief glance in the mirror. His longish chocolatey-brown hair was a huge mess, strands sticking out in all directions. He had a green hoodie and a pair of jeans on; he hadn't bothered to change last night. He then took a look at the clock; it was 2:32 in the morning. In confusion, he sleepily dragged himself to see what all the fuss was about. He wasn't particularly worried, though. Hiccup was pretty sure his cat had been dropped on his head when he was young. Toothless had always been kind of...eccentric. As he reached the kitchen of his apartment, where the sound was coming from, he heard a familiar, thick Scottish accent.

"Ye stupid cat! Please, just shu' up!"

There, in the middle of the kitchen, was his girlfriend, Merida, trying to get Toothless to back away from her, pointing a broom at her. Her wild bright red hair was messily pulled into a ponytail, tight curls bursting out from the back of her head like a volcanic eruption. She was wearing a navy blue sweatshirt, and a pair of knee-length basketball shorts. She suddenly noticed Hiccup, almost dropping the broom on Toothless.

>"Oh uh...hi Hiccup." He laughed a little and stepped closer toward her

"Merida, it's 2:30am, what are you doing here?" Merida explained

She had been trying to retrieve her phone from his apartment, as she had left it there earlier that night. She tried her best not to wake up hiccup, but in the process of trying to move across the floor of the kitchen, where she remembered leaving her phone, she stepped on the easily upset cat's tail, causing him to let out an odd sound that awoke Hiccup. Hiccup laughed again, kissing her on the cheek.

"I love you, even when you're an idiot."
